Designed and developed the company's e-commerce website. I built the site on Opencart since it's open-source and widely used by local businesses. The interface was designed in Photoshop and brought to life with the help of Twig and CSS. I implemented schema.org markup for better exposure and ranking on social networks and in search engines results. I worked continuously on creating promotional pages, banners, managing the site and integrating it with business tools used by the company.

Mastered Adobe Photoshop, then, I started to look for ways to bring my designs to life. So, I thought, game development. After learning C# and Unity 3D I published my first game called "BitRacing" on Google Play. Trying to promote my game I discovered the fascinating world of web development. After studying the domain more, I fell in love with it and started to pursue my career as a web developer.
